interference in the Federal elections. It is not a question of encroachment, or of following the bad example set by the Socialists in the past. It is a matter now of self-defence, and the States must put before the electors of the Commonwealth their case for immediate consideration.

In another eighteen months they will be absolutely at the mercy of the Federal Parliament—a contingency never contemplated by the framers of the Constitution, and their finances may easily be thrown into chaos by a Government like the present one, which has no thought of anything but its own aims and intentions.

It was supposed when the Braddon clause was framed that ten years' experience of the necessities of the situation would be sufficient to enable the Commonwealth to devise a scheme equitable to the States and fair to itself; otherwise the present temporary arrangement would have been made permanent. But Mr. Fisher is so clearly out with a gun, and has so little regard for the other side of the case, that the States must protect themselves.

This can only be done by appeal to the Federal electors, and by a shrewd effort to send men to the Senate who will insist upon fair play. The State Premiers at Hobart were under no misconception in the matter. They were quite prepared to concede to the Commonwealth more than they have now offered before, and their proposals, then passed unanimously, have been rejected by the Federal Government.

Since Parliament meets next month, and a general election may be upon us soon after, it behoves the electors to consider the question and be ready to deal justly with the most important matter.

Acquittal of Tom Mann.
The acquittal of Tom Mann must not be interpreted as a verdict of "Not Guilty" against the Broken Hill miners in their recent defiance of the police and their contempt for the law. happy. It is distinctly mean of the Ching-Raiway Commissioners not to have let us know a little earlier that we could go so far by rail. However, when the aerolite is in going order it will probably make Paradise its headquarters.

The Optimists.—Two widely-different institutions, according to newspaper reports, have been established in America—an Optimists' Club and a Suicide Club. The latter is unknown to Australia, but a circular shows that an Optimists' Club has been established, and every one who can smile in the face of trouble is invited to join it.

In other words, it is the cult of cheerfulness. It has not the semblance of a political complexion—one of the illusions of the club is to "work hard, think big, and talk little." The real revolution carried for the formation of the club in America was: "Whereas there is a wave of pessimism and lack of confidence sweeping over our country to-day, making the limit more and more distant, and causing strong men to tremble, and whereas there is a spirit abroad which tends to put the emphasis on the negative side of life, leading to conditions of extreme gloom, and to the possibility of the establishment of an organization for the purpose of putting the emphasis on the positive side of life, and encouraging optimism and confidence, therefore, be it resolved that a national Optimists' Club be formed, encouraging and disseminating optimistic thought and a spirit of confidence throughout the land."

This movement has reached Sydney, and the Optimists' Club of New South Wales is being formed. It is a club of men who are not afraid of trouble, and who are not afraid of death. It is a club of men who are not afraid of the future, and who are not afraid of the past.
